Thresholds, codes and identifiers are illustrative.

1. Customer due diligence

- Identify and verify the customer, natural persons appointed to act, connected parties and beneficial owners.
- Screen against relevant sanctions and terrorism designation lists at onboarding and on an ongoing basis.
- For occasional transactions, apply CDD at or above SGD 20,000, and for wire transfers at or above SGD 1,500.
- Foreign PEPs are treated as higher risk by default; domestic PEPs and international organisation PEPs are treated on a risk-sensitive basis.

2. Wire transfer information

Ordering institutions must include the value date, originator name, account or unique reference, and address or identification number, together with beneficiary name and account. Beneficiary institutions must have policies to handle incomplete transfers, including rejection or suspension and consideration of an STR.

3. Suspicious transaction reporting

Reports are filed with the suspicious transaction reporting office. There is no monetary threshold; the test is knowledge or reasonable grounds to suspect. Filing is required promptly, and in any case within 15 business days of establishing suspicion unless urgency requires immediate notification.

4. Local red flags

- Wealth management account funded from a jurisdiction unrelated to the customer's stated residence or business, with source of wealth evidenced only by self-declaration.
- Trade finance documents showing pricing materially divergent from market for commodity shipments through regional transshipment hubs.

- Rapid incorporation of several holding companies sharing one corporate service provider address and one nominee director.
- Digital payment token activity with unhosted wallets exceeding declared investment capacity.
